

9.1 Potentials

A potential is established if there is a real interest in your products/services from both potential and current customers, opening up a negotiation process. If it is not created automatically through conversion (see the section on Leads), you can subsequently add the potential to the Company to which it is addressed, through the relations menu.

The potential is the container of the negotiation and all the information, documents and communication between you and the customer strictly related to the individual negotiation.

In addition, the tool has commercial forecast and report objectives that should not be overlooked (e.g. the Budget tool available for this purpose). The option of customising the registry by modifying the fields through Layout Editor also applies to Potentials, as for all the vtenext modules.

Description Information:

Description

Potential Name	Name of the potential
Amount (€)	Useful for anyone wishing to make predictions about the value of open potentials, even though the initial value may be indicative. It is self-calculated at the time of linking with a quote if product lines have been organised
Account name	Link to the customer company present in the CRM
Expected Close Date	Expected date of conclusion of the deal
Type	Allows for cataloguing between existing and new business
Next Step	The next step in the negotiation

Lead Source	Reports the origin of the lead, in the event that the potential arises from a lead conversion
Sales Stage	Important to know the state of progress of the negotiation
Assigned to	By default, assigned to the user who creates it. Identifies the salesperson who manages the negotiation
Probability (%)	Probability of success of the negotiation which, multiplied by the amount, makes it possible to obtain a plausible forecast of the value of the single potential
Campaign Source	If the source is an ongoing or completed campaign, you can link it

Potentials can also be exported and imported via .csv (see relevant chapter).
